

Old Burying Ground Inventory

Mechanic Street, Westfield, Massachusetts

This compilation was created from the original Master listed created by Walter Ayers, former head of the Westfield Parks Dept. The original list also included updates signifying Revolutionary War veterans. Updates were also done during a 1995 Inventory, with more updates made by volunteers in 2005.

Supplemental updates have been performed as new information became available.

This list was converted to the current format by Bruce W. Cortis beginning in December of 2020.

In addition to local, state and federal records, family genealogies and histories were used as supporting documents or in place of official records not in existence.

The majority of the family histories and genealogies listed can be electronically downloaded from the Internet Archive web site @ www.archive.org

The list of keys to the sources and a bibliography of the various publications used are included at the end of the listing

The list contains names which have been verified as burials in the Old Burying Ground. There are undoubtedly many additional people who are likely buried here for which there are no monuments or verifiable information. This includes not only local families but additional individuals such as slaves who may have had unmarked graves.

To date, the oldest known documented inventory of Old Burying Ground internments is a volume known as the Journal of Henry Holland, c. 1885. From all appearances this compilation is based on the works of Joseph Bartlett. Bartlett documented his recordings of the Old Burial Ground in a series of handwritten notebooks and also published much of that information in a series of newspaper articles in the Westfield Times and Newsletter newspaper between Dec. 1885 and June of 1886. While the journal is attributed to Henry Holland, it appears the actual transcription was written by a third person no earlier than 1897.

Holland - Journal of Henry Holland of Westfield c. 1895-1890. Henry Holland recorded the gravestones and epitaphs in the Old Burying Ground circa 1895 with additional notes into the early 1890's. The Holland Journal was compared to the 1939 Inventory. The Holland Journal appears to be the base document for the 1939 Inventory. Not only are the two documents almost exactly the same (with the exception of some epitaphs), also several errors in the Holland journal have been exactly replicated in the 1939 document. The Henry Holland journal is housed in the archives in the Westfield Athenaeum.
